

A method is provided for conducting a purchase/sales transaction over a computer network (such as the Internet) where the customer remains anonymous to the merchant. The invention belongs to the category of Internet related purchase/sales transactions with several remote computers involved.